Our Mission

We are the leading resource to empower and heal children and families who have experienced abuse and prevent violence against children.
Helping kids in crisis

A global pandemic isn't the only threat to child safety

As frontline workers in the fight against child abuse, the pandemic forced us to think creatively and establish new approaches to ensure our vital work continued. Thanks to the dedication of our staff, Board of Directors, donors, and supporters, our doors stayed open and our services remain free, despite the challenges the pandemic has caused.

But, our work is just beginning. COVID-19 created a perfect storm for child abuse because of the acute stress and isolation it caused. Kids are at greater risk for abuse at home than anywhere else: nearly 90% of perpetrators are family members. Child abuse has been underreported throughout the pandemic because the stay-at-home order prevented children from talking to trusted adults in privacy, away from their abusers.
It was clear that something was troubling 14-year-old Eva when she video chatted with her school social worker. Eva was usually chatty, but sometimes she would look offscreen and suddenly become silent. The social worker finally found out why when they met in person. Eva’s stepdad raped her when she was seven. The abuse began again during the pandemic when she was home alone with him while her mom was at work. Eva wanted to tell her, but he came into the room every time she tried.

The situation has devastated Eva and her mom, but there is hope. Eva disclosed the details of the abuse to our Forensic Interviewer, Melanie, which is the first step to a criminal investigation. And she and her mom have started seeing our therapists, who are specially trained in overcoming abuse and trauma.

All services are free and offered in English and Spanish.
Our extensively trained FAS team supports a child and family through the legal process of the abuse investigation. We coordinate with local law enforcement, State’s Attorney’s Office, and DCFS to conduct Forensic Interviews that limit trauma and collect all necessary information to proceed with the case. Advocates support families and connect them to medical, mental health, and other community services.

Family Support Services

Clients are often in crisis when we meet them because of trauma they have experienced. Our therapists connect with them through compassion and empathy. Sexual abuse, physical abuse, and neglect are forms of what researchers call ACEs: adverse childhood experiences that are linked to both mental and physical health problems. The science and practice of treating trauma symptoms has exploded in the past decade. We are experts in the field and offer individualized treatments based on age, experiences and type of abuse experienced.

Safe from the Start

Our SFTS program is unlike any other in the area. We offer free therapy for children birth-5 who have experienced violence in their households. These children are often overlooked, but we make their care a priority. Recent studies have shown that witnessing violence increases a child’s risk of reduced brain development, increased learning and behavioral problems and the risk of becoming violent as an adult. Our team helps this vulnerable population by listening to them, believing them, and helping them process trauma.

Healing Hearts

Spring 2021

In the spring of 2021, we partnered with WT Group to launch Healing Hearts - a community movement to spread hope and spark meaningful conversations about child abuse support and prevention. Sponsors and supporters purchased various-sized heart sculptures to display at their places of business or homes. Local artists painted the sculptures to create one-of-a-kind art pieces that serve as physical representations of the hope and healing that happens at CAC.
